

Cheryl Roberts, President of Chemeketa Community College

As President of Chemeketa, I am excited about the future, why don't you come along with me, and let me show you why I am so excited.

On May 20th, voters are going to have a hand in shaping the future of Chemeketa Community College. If the bond levy passes, Chemeketa will be positioned to meet the demands of our changing and depleted work force. Just take a look.

Fire Department Program Officer

Out Program here at Chemeketa is a wonderful combination of not only theory and academic but of hands-on training. It gives us a huge advantage in the work place.

President

Chemeketa Community College enrolled 64,000 students this year at five campuses with the average student being 32 years old. Chemeketa is one of the most important institutions of higher learning in the region; and at the same time, Chemeketa tuition is the lowest in the State of community colleges.

Student with Fire Department Program

With the training and experience from Chemeketa Community College Fire Program, I will be on the road to my dreams of helping people in the community.

Student

Chemeketa was there when I needed to make a career change and now I am excited to become an engineer and give back to my community.

President

The Chemeketa bond levy is for $92 million dollars; and when you look at where the money goes, you can see that the funds will help Chemeketa be more prepared to meet the demands of the community in professions desperately needing to graduate students for anxious employers.

Student

I am almost ready to graduate, and it looks like there is a job waiting for me. Chemeketa helped me get my career on track.

President

As you can see, there are some exciting things happening at Chemeketa Community College. We are meeting the demands of a changing market place to a growing work force. We take those things seriously.
