How to Teach it so They Get it. Teaching Styles, Learning Styles, and How to Use Both to Make the Learning Last

Bldg. 34, Rm. 101

Explore the connections between how you learn, teach, present, and communicate. Find out what the newest research says about why you choose certain instructional strategies and avoid others. Discover how to "style-stretch," so the instruction works most of the time for most of your learners. Includes a 4-step instructional design and delivery model based on ways most people naturally learn, not how they were made to learn. Leave with a broadened perspective of learning styles, as well as strategies to help you stretch into new ways of teaching. Presented by Sharon Bowman, Author and Professional Speaker.

How to Create a Humane Classroom to Support Diversity

Bldg. 22, Rm. 112

Highlight ways instructors can include diversity in their teaching to encourage qualities that ease cultural adjustment. Address four value orientations: Doing to being, free will to determinism, youth to age, and private to public. Presented by Diane Tehrani and Karen Swallow, Clark Community College.

How Adults Learn Best

Bldg. 22, Rm. 111

Focus on the characteristics of adult learners. Identify strategies that make connections with students, move students past learning blocks, and increase participation and motivation. Includes a checklist to evaluate your own teaching style and methods. Presented by Cecelia Barry, Chemeketa Community College.

A Chance for Part-time Chemeketa English Instructors to meet with Full-time English Program Colleagues

Bldg. 22, Rm. 110

Ask questions and offer suggestions as you meet with fellow full-time English faculty. Share ideas and practices that support your teaching at Chemeketa. Facilitated by Bob LeRoy, Donna Bernhisel and Tammy Jabin, Chemeketa Community College.

Luncheon and Great Ideas for Teaching Students (GIFTS) Session Bldg. 34
12:00-1:20 p.m.

During the lunch break, get practical teaching ideas as you move from table to table for short 10-minute presentations. Presentations begin at 12:40 p.m. and will highlight best practices for engaging students and managing the classroom.

GIFTS Presenters:

- Emily Flory—Team Projects in the Classroom: Highlight or Headache?
- Paul Gregorio—Accessing and Using Electronic Libraries
- Kristin O'Shea—What Did You Say? Teaching Critical Listening Skills
- Malia Stevens—Prime Time: Teaching to Maximize Learning

Afternoon Workshops A
1:30-2:20 p.m.

PowerPoint Presentations that Work

Bldg. 33, Rm. 106

Discover tips and strategies to make lectures more exciting and effective by using PowerPoint and its tools. Includes discussion about graphics, storyboarding, animation, and more. Presented by Beth Hale, Chemeketa Community College.

How to Prepare Students for the Writing Center

Bldg. 22, Rm. 112

Discuss the use of a Writing Center and learn ways to help students recognize it as a tool to their success, and to prepare them for the work that happens in the unique space called the Writing Center. Presented by Laura Van Dyke, Chemeketa Community College.

Creating Brain-based Lessons for Your Classroom

Bldg. 22, Rm. 111

Understand the basics of brain-based research and how it can be applied to help students use and develop critical thinking skills. Includes ways to get students' brains revved up and engaged through the entire class using your classroom curriculum. Presented by GwenEllyn Anderson, Chemeketa Community College.

Strategies to Provoke Critical Thinking

Bldg. 22, Rm. 110

Promote the development of students' critical thinking skills by learning about the vital role of questioning and how you can model critical thinking to students. Presented by Louanne Whittton, Chemeketa Community College.

Afternoon Workshops B
2:30-3:20 p.m.

Creating Instructional Websites with Google

Bldg. 33, Rm. 106

Watch a demonstration of Google Sites and learn how to present material, collaborate and communicate with students or colleagues, share calendars, documents, presentations, and more. Presented by Jim Blodget, Chemeketa Community College.

Teaching to All Learning Styles

Bldg. 22, Rm. 112

Experience a series of classroom strategies conducive to all learning styles, focusing on visual, auditory, and kinesthetic modalities. Online materials, web sites, and face-to-face activities will be shared. Presented by Robin Gilley, Chemeketa Community College.

Pedagogical Approaches to Web-based Courses

Bldg. 22, Rm. 110

Gain practical strategies and techniques to teach web-based courses. Includes updated pedagogical approaches. Presented by Patty Wilde, Portland Community College.
